"FIGHTIN' MAD" PICTURE FULL OF THRILLS

For those who love daring feats of adventure and romance filled with swift action, "Fightin' Mad," a Metro release for William Desmond Productions which comes Saturday to the Alamo and Grand, will be adequately satisfied.

This screen adaption of an original story of H. H. Van Loan, author of "The Virgin of Stamboul" and many other screen successes, is a rapidly moving romance.

As a hard-riding, two-listed adventurous lover, William Desmond plays the part to perfection, while Virginia Brown Faire is altogether delightful as the young girl from the city who is suddenly thrown into the whirl of events on the border of civilization. Rosemary Theby, who won fame in the leading feminine role in "A Connecticut Yankee," makes a typical brigand's sweetheart, while William Lawrence leaves nothing to be desired as the brigand chief.

SERVICE

Successful operation of public utilities is advantageous to a community. Good service means progress. Poor public utility service spells economic loss.

The success of a public utility, like the success of any other business, depends upon liberal patronage from residents of the community it serves.

It is a matter of mutual interest for the community and the operators of the public utility, that the service shall be sufficient and satisfactory.

The property owner, the manufacturer, the merchant, the salaried man, the wage earner—all are interested in maintaining adequate public utility service. Without it their property values and incomes would be materially reduced.

No other single institution is perhaps so important to the civic progress.

A Russian writer says that "All Russia wants is to be left alone." To an unbiased bystander it seems that all Russia wants is to get a loan.
